ORDER OF PUBLICATION.
In the Circuit Court of Iron County, Mo., in vacation,
July 29th, 1893.
The State of Missouri, at the relation and to the use of P. W. Whitworth, collector of the revenue of Iron County, Mo., against Orlando Child, the heirs of Eliza H. Shepherd, deceased, Benjamin Tanner, Rufus Walker, John C.
H. Clark, Isiah W. Reed, Andrew Freberg, and all unknown interested parties.
(Action to Enforce Payment of Taxes.)
Now at this day comes the plaintiff, P. W. Whitworth, collector of the revenue of Iron County, Missouri, and files his petition and affidavit, setting forth among other things, that the defendants are non-residents of the State of Missouri and cannot be summoned in this action by the ordinary process of law; it is, therefore, ordered by the Clerk of the Circuit Court of said County, Mo., that publication be made, notifying said defendants that an action has been commenced against them in the Circuit Court of said County, Mo., to enforce the lien of the State of Missouri for back taxes for the years 1890 and 1891, inclusive, on the following real estate, belonging to said defendants, to wit:
The south half of lot 2 and the north half of lot 1 of the southwest quarter of section 30, and lot 1 and the north half of lot 2 of the northwest quarter of section 31, all in township 32 north, range 3 east, in Iron County, Mo.
(An itemized statement in the nature of a tax bill, showing the amount of taxes now due on said real estate, for the years 1890 and 1891, is filed with said petition as provided by law.) And unless they be and appear at the next term of said court, to be held for said County of Iron, and State of Missouri, at the courthouse in said County, on the fourth Monday in October next (1893), and on or before the third day thereof (if the term shall be so long continued, and, if not, then before the end of the term), and plead, answer or demur to said plaintiff's petition, the same will be taken as confessed, judgment rendered in accordance with the prayer of said petition, and said real estate, or so much thereof as may be necessary to satisfy said judgment, interest and costs, be sold under a special fieri facias to be issued thereon.
It is further ordered that a copy hereof be published according to law in the Iron County Register, a weekly newspaper published in said County of Iron, and State of Missouri.

A FEW Testimonials from persons who have been cured by the use of Hill's Tablets.
THE OHIO CHEMICAL CO.:—DEAR SIR:—I have been using your cure for tobacco habit, and found it would do what you claim for it. I used ten cents worth of the strongest chewing tobacco a day, and from one to five cigars, or I would smoke from ten to forty pipes of tobacco. Have chewed and smoked for twenty-five years, and two packages of your Tablets cured me so I have no desire for it.
B. M. JAYLORD, Leslie, Mich.
PITTSBURGH, PA.
THE OHIO CHEMICAL CO.:—GENTLEMEN:—Some time ago I sent for $1.00 worth of your Tablets for Tobacco Habit. I received them all right, and although I was both a heavy smoker and chewer, they did the work in less than three days. I am cured.
Truly yours, MATTHEW JOHNSON, P. O. Box 45.
THE OHIO CHEMICAL CO.:—GENTLEMEN:—It gives me pleasure to speak a word of praise for your Tablets. My son was strongly addicted to the use of liquor, and through a friend, I was led to try your Tablets. He was a heavy and constant drinker, but after using your Tablets but three days he quit drinking, and will not touch liquor of any kind. I have waited four months before writing you, in order to know the cure was permanent.
Yours truly,
MRS. HELEN MORRISON, CINCINNATI, OHIO.
THE OHIO CHEMICAL CO.:—GENTLEMEN:—Your Tablets have performed a miracle in my case. I have used morphine, hypodermically, for seven years, and have been cured by the use of two packages of your Tablets, and without any effort on my part.

The Editor's Vacation.
Thursday morning, after breakfast, we took a wagonette and went straight to the Fair, fully equipped with "courtesies" for the fray. (In polite newspaper circles, "courtesies" is the proper word—"free passes" a vulgarism.)
The ladies had their innings this morning, and for several hours we plodded our weary way through miles of grasses, plants and flowers, the writer determined to make no complaint and to receive pleasure vicariously, as it were. At length we emerged from the department of Floriculture and betook ourselves to the section devoted to fruit exhibits. Of these California's is grand beyond compare, embracing as it does the product of every climate, tropic, semi-tropic and temperate. Apples, pears, oranges, lemons, grapes, bananas, cherries, strawberries, every variety of fruit that grows to gladden the eye and taste of man—make up its collection. The arrangement of the exhibit is wonderful. Pyramids of oranges and lemons form the piece de resistance of the show, while jars of preserved fruits tastefully arranged beautify and extend it. We noted particularly a display of beautiful, clear-skinned lemons, labeled, "Plucked two years ago." They looked as fresh as if taken from the tree that morning, and our bump of credulity was tested to its fullest; but on inquiry we were told that a recently discovered process of "sweating" renders this fruit almost imperishable.
Another object that attracted the attention of all visitors was the figure in gigantic proportions of a horse and rider. Every portion of the statue, even to the saddle, bridle and stirrups, was formed of prunes of various colors. The whole is said to weigh 20,000 pounds. The State applied for twenty times the space that could be given her, and judging from that she has, the beholder is lost in wonder at what her exhibit would have been under such condition. As it is, after one leaves the Fair, her display looms in the memory as does the genius of Shakespeare in the literary world.
The Missouri exhibit, although confined to the products of the temperate zone, is such as to awaken the pride of her citizens who are so fortunate as to look upon it. Placed in juxtaposition to those of the finest fruit-producing lands in the world, it takes no discredit by the comparison. The display is not so extensive as that of California's, but in its province it is as creditable.
After "doing" the fruits of all the earth, we took welcome adjournment to lunch, and, afterward, had our first survey of the Plaisance. On entering we went to the Esquimaux Village, and for a time our attention was taken by a party of four men popping their long whips at a mark for pennies and nickels. The coin was the mark, placed in the ground about twenty-five feet from the artists of the lash, who took turn about popping at it. The coin became the property of the person who, with the tip of his lash, dislodged it from its place. One of the whippers was a boy about twelve years old, and he was one of the most expert. His success evidently pleased his elder competitors, who smiled with satisfaction every time he captured the prize. A team of dogs, attached to a truck in a little wooden tramway, in lieu of the sledge and frozen track of the arctic, ran back and forth in imitation of the native mode of transportation. Reindeers, also, brought from the regions of everlasting snow and ice, lay panting in the shade, or unwillingly traversed the street pulling a substitute for the lighter-running sledges used at home. All about the lagoon were men in kayaks, or native boats built of whalebone and covered with skin. The boatmen rowed lazily back and forth, and seemed at home in their fragile vessels, but we didn't see any of them perform that famous water somersault we have all read about. Perhaps the water of the lagoon was too warm for their aurora borealis constitutions!

Then we visited the Vienna Cafe; drank a glass of beer and listened to the music of a string band composed of equal parts of men and women. After a genuine, to-the-manner-born mazurka by the instruments, the three girls sang an old-country ballad, the music of rather mournful numbers, though the words must have been light and pleasing; for the prima donna of the trio smiled vigorously, and laboriously exposed her fine white teeth all through the rendition. She evidently captivated a young and tender dude who was very conspicuous in his callowness, and made the casual observer to wish to spank him soundly and send him home to his mamma.
The main street of the Plaisance is a sort of kaleidescapic of nations: at every turn comes a change of costumes and peoples. Turks, Arabs, Hindoos, Africans, Japanese, Chinese, Javanese, Fiji Islanders, Indians, etc., crowd the way, and every tongue known to the planet is used in this limited space. This to us was the biggest show, and we had but limited desire to see the side-shows, seriatim. We took in the German Village, the Turkish Theatre, and one or two other of them, "just to be a-doing," but they were of minor importance, to our notion. The Dahomey Village, however, is curious enough to the civilized beholder, and is constantly thronged by sight-seers. There is African life in all its savage simplicity and lack of decorum. A friend, a resident of Chicago and a frequent visitor at the Fair, whom we met afterward, asked if we had seen this part of the show. We told him we had. Said he, "I'll bet you didn't have an experience similar to mine." "Perhaps not," we replied. "What was your experience?" "I'll tell you. About three weeks ago I went there for the first time. As I was looking about me, I noticed at the further end of the village a large crowd, and all seemed particularly interested and somewhat excited about something, I could not tell what. The crowd would gradually close up to a certain point, remain stationary a few moments, and then suddenly sway outward in a hurry, their movements accompanied with shouts and laughter. Of course I wanted to know what it meant, and I quickly moved toward the scene. The crowd was standing about in high good humor, but I couldn't see anything to justify the excitement. Looking about me, I saw at a distance of about thirty steps an African family standing outside their hut. The family was made up of a man, a woman, and several children; the first two named were very scantily clothed, and the latter not clad at all. I moved up to get a closer view, and the crowd moved with me, but a little in my rear. I was interested, and was curious to hear the man and woman converse in their tribal dialect. For this reason I drew closer still to them, apparently unnoticed by the objects of my curiosity. I didn't like to appear too intrusive, so I halted at the distance of about fifteen feet, and proceeded to quietly take in the scene, as did the crowd behind me. Suddenly the woman caught hold of one of her breasts—there was no impeding covering—raised it, took quick aim, and shot a stream of genuine Dahomey milk spang into my face! How that crowd roared and yelled, you may imagine; and the woman who had made me her victim laughed till the tears ran down her sable cheeks. I wiped my face in silence, and waited philosophically for recompense in the woes of the next victim. He came along in due time, and the woman didn't miss her aim. They told me she could hit a dime at twenty-five feet, every pop. But you can't see a repetition of that sharp-shooting exhibition: the manager of the village, when he heard of it, came around and put his official seal of condemnation on it."
Among the other attractions here, is a Turkish fire company, with engine, hose, buckets, etc., complete. The company is made up of about a dozen men, and the engine is carried about as needed. While we were viewing the diminutive machine, an exhibition alarm was sounded, the men assembled, picked up the engine, and off they went at a keen run—returning after an absence of three or four minutes. We had somehow gained the impression that "the unspeakable Turk" was stern-visaged, severe, and of generally sullen demeanor. But these were of a totally different cast: they ran out and trooped in laughing and chattering like a lot of school-boys at play-time, and their faces expressed the utmost of good humor. They were dressed in their home costume, which, somehow, didn't set out of place upon them.

The German Village looks as if it had been taken up bodily, transported, and set down here: so true is the fashion of the quaint buildings to the originals as we have seen them pictured and described by those who have seen the real Vaterland. The Village dispenses excellent music and good lager beer, besides other things drinkable, eatable and acceptable to human soul and body.

We did not take in the Chinese Theatre. A six-weeks' play had started in a day or two previous to our advent, and we knew we couldn't stay to see it out. We abhor an unfinished drama or a fragmentary part of a book. Thackeray's "Denis Duval"—what there is of him—is a cruel hoax, and ought never have been printed. A law making administrators, executors and assigns liable to capital punishment for publishing unfinished manuscript would meet, we think, with hearty approval.

So we gave the Celestial theatre the go-by, notwithstanding the resounding cymbals' stirring music. To our notion, anyway, the Plaisance has few attractions to him who seeks desirable instruction, and outside of two or three specialties, is not an indispensable adjunct to the Fair.

With this reflection we left the grounds, went to our hotel, ate our dinner, smoked a Havana "on the land," went to bed, and slept the sleep of the just.

Democratic "Rural Roosters" on the Gold Standard Message.

[Lebanon Rustic.]
The Rustic this week publishes President Cleveland's message to Congress in full. It is a strong argument for gold but does not carry out the pledges of the Democratic National Platform.

[Centerville Reformer.]
President Cleveland's message to Congress is, as we expected, a very strong argument in favor of a single gold standard. We hope, however, that Congress will pass a free and unlimited coinage bill and give him a chance to veto it.

[Farmington Times.]
We want a money system that will not bankrupt the debtor class. The borrower ought to have some rights which the gold bugs can be made to respect.

A coinage law that does not discriminate, with a reasonable ratio between gold and silver, is what the people demand, and they look to the Fifty-third Congress to give them such a law.

[Richmond Democrat.]
The President's message is a disappointment to Democrats but a pleasing document to eastern Republicans. It is a square out and out gold standard measure. In it there is not a good word for silver but its use as money, is deprecated as strongly as it is possible to put words together. Mr. Cleveland leaves no doubt in the minds of the people where he stands. Democrats, you have been sold out. The man who said in his letter accepting a Democratic nomination that he was in favor of both gold and silver as the money of our country is a traitor to that promise, and now demands that silver be eliminated and gold alone be made a standard. But while he has gone this far, it is morally certain that he cannot take a Democratic Congress with him, and his purpose to rob the debtor class by doubling their obligations will fail. The congressman or senator, elected as a Democrat, who follows off after Mr. Cleveland's ideas can make his arrangements to retire to private life at the end of his term. The people will be heard at the polls in thunder tones on this question.

[Dunklin Democrat.]
Mr. Cleveland is back in Washington, still limping a little, but not lame at all to what he will be when the west and south have walked on him awhile in the silver battle, now just starting.

[Jackson Cash-Book.]
In his message to Congress Mr. Cleveland says "our Government cannot make its fiat equivalent to intrinsic value, nor keep inferior money on a parity with superior money." If the parity of gold and silver as money depends on the relation between intrinsic value of the two metals then all talk about the parity of gold and silver money may as well stop. It seems to us whatever value our money has depends on the Government's fiat and not on the intrinsic worth of the metal used to stamp it upon. If the Government would dissolve partnership with all interests coming between it and the people and get single-handed in the currency issuing business may be our President would have no occasion to speak of "inferior" and "superior" money. Money ought to be money if law is law.

The Howell County Gazette publishes the message under the heading, "Outspoken for Gold," and in commenting on it, says:

He, however, recognizes that silver is one of the money metals of this country which must be maintained, but points out that, with the present attitude of European countries, the proper ratio between gold and silver cannot be maintained by this country alone. Therefore, he does not favor the coinage of it under present conditions, except for subsidiary purposes. He thinks the European nations who are depressing the price of silver can be the suppression of its coinage in this country except for subsidiary purposes be coerced into an international agreement more favorable than heretofore. He is in favor of silver on a parity with gold and stands by the platform of 1892 but says that platform cannot be carried out for the reason that a fixed parity cannot be maintained.

[Salem Monitor.]
Grover Cleveland is a gold-bug, and the pillar of Eastern Shyllocks. What he needs now is to have his nose held to the Democratic National Platform until he inhales a sufficiency of pure Democracy to act as an antidote to his goldbugism.

[The Southeast Gazette.]
A gold-bug message from a gold-bug President dominated by gold-bug Wall Street.

[Clayton Argus.]
Read Cleveland's message. It is full of thoughts for reflection and all who read may gain wisdom from it. It is mainly and deals squarely with the issues which Congress has been called upon to settle.

[Bloomfield Vindicator.]
There is very little in his message to encourage silver advocates, and it is not altogether in accord with the financial plank of the Chicago platform, upon which Mr. Cleveland was elected.

[Charleston Democrat.]
Mr. Cleveland forgets the people. The people want free silver coinage; good for them or bad, wise or foolish, they still want free coinage, and not treaties in favor of the single standard. Well! Grover's all right, we presume; but where in the dickens is the Democratic party?

An Epidemic of Bloody Flux.
Last summer the flux raged here to a fearful extent. About five miles north of here at the Whiteside graveyard there were five victims of this dreadful disease buried in one day. The doctors could do nothing with the disease. When my family was taken, I went to Walter Brothers, of Waltham, and told them the situation. They said, give Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy; that they had sent out several hundred bottles into the infected district and "everyday we hear how this medicine is curing them. So far we have not heard of its failing in a single instance." I went to giving it and could soon see the good effects it was the result. Anyone in doubt about these facts may write to me.—L. C.
